

DEE FISH NETS NEW INDUSTRIAL UNIT

A STEADMAN & SON

Leading building products manufacturer Steadmans has supplied materials for a new industrial unit at major Scottish fish catcher, processor and retailer, Dee Fish, located in Bogue, Kirkcudbright.

The new building, installed by Dumfries-based M K Welding, benefits from 2,000 linear metres of Steadmans AS35 insulated panels, with 100mm goosewing grey used for the roof and 80mm olive green used for the walls.

The company's one-stop-shop capability also saw it provide 1,250 linear metres of purlins, eaves beams and a host of ancillary products including fixings and flashings.

Michael Keane, owner of M K Welding, commented: “We have used Steadmans for practically all our jobs for the last 20 years. You can always rely on them to deliver exactly what you ask for, when you need it. They are extremely easy to deal with and, unlike many of their competitors, are able to keep their promises.

“To be able to get all of the products we need from the one supplier saves us a lot of time and money and it is less disruptive in terms of getting deliveries onto site.”

Comprising two outer steel skins with an integral PIR insulation core, AS35 insulated panels are available in a wide range of colours and complement Steadmans’ broad variety of pre-engineered construction products, such as gutters, rooflights and doors.

AS35 panels are manufactured in a quality process certified to ISO 9001:2008, using non-ozone depleting technology. This provides designers with an environmentally-responsible product, with excellent thermal performance and a predicted service life of 40 years. Available in a range of thicknesses, the panels can be specified to achieve insulation U-values, aiding compliance with the latest Part L2 building regulations. The panels are also Loss Prevention Certification Board approved.

Dee Fish is a family run business, with 20 years’ experience in the fishing industry based in Bogue, a small village in the South West of Scotland. With a smokehouse and local supply of fresh Scottish salmon, combined with three trawlers supplying white fish and shellfish, Dee Fish operates an online store as well as having a shop in Castle Douglas.
